Supporting the basics Before starting, it is important to understand how the software works. The following list tells you what you need to know to get started. Where the image files should go: In most cases, you should put image files where they should go: on a hard disk or CD or DVD drive. Photoshop takes up an immense amount of disk space when you open the file, and it is common for most files to be quite large. Therefore, if you can work on a project and keep your files in a different folder, that is the best option. On a Mac, the default location for the application itself is `Applications/Photoshop CS6`, and all other files are in the `Documents` folder. On a Windows computer, the default location for Photoshop is `C:\Program Files\Adobe Photoshop CS6`, and all other files are in the `Documents` folder. The image files are also saved in the `Photoshop` folder; the file extensions for the two types of files are different —.psd for Photoshop and.psb for Photoshop Elements — but they do not affect how you save and work with the files. The steps to complete a simple edit: To change a file, you click it and then select one of the edit tools that you want to use to change the image. You can see the tool in the top-right corner of the workspace, or you can display or hide the tool bar by using the F6 and F7 keys on your keyboard. To change an element's color, look for the color swatches in the swatches panel. The image in Figure 9-1 shows these tools from the default toolbar. FIGURE 9-1: You can use any of these tools to make your changes. To save a change, click the save button at the bottom of the window; the Pipelis Pipelis is an irregular coral reef platform located off the coast of Queensland, Australia. Pipelis is part of the Great Barrier Reef Marine Park and is exposed at the surface of the ocean. It has no structure on it, just the sand and debris that was placed there by the waves. The name comes from the reef off the coast of Cape York that the reef resembles. It was first seen in an 1844 British survey, but not described at that time. The highest recorded sea level at Pipelis was in the 1948-49. There has been a steady decrease in sea level since then. Parts of Pipelis are subject to severe erosion by marine current, sand, and sediment. As a result, parts of Pipelis were covered by sand with a maximum depth of. We're in Australia, it's a relatively small country, so it's not like we're constantly looking to export our brand into other markets, or the other way around. So we didn't really do any of that stuff. We just wanted to make a game that was us, and that'
