 - Mutation produces new idea (cell)
 - Inteilation unlocks idea, if the selected cell does not produces quality line (triangle), the machine tries to unlock the idea if the maze is not fully explored
 - Seeding characterizes the idea, modifies some cells and use character to bootstrap in a unique cell with possible quality line

Notes

- If the machine does not find any new idea on the maze, the fuzzing algorithm produce lots of new ideas without line

There are many types of surfaces in the game. Dry surfaces: e.g. mud, desert sands, snow, ice, sludge. Wet surfaces: e.g. shallow water, water pools, and mud. Dry surfaces generate a lot of heat, which can be of immediate advantage to you. However, it can also damage your engine and decrease your battery power. Wet surfaces do not generate heat, but they are slippery and can cause damage to the aircraft, if you don't pay attention. They are also fuel savers, as you can land near water pools and slushy land, and fuel will not be wasted. Do not confuse wet surfaces and hot surfaces with mud, as it will still be slippery, but it will not generate heat, and thus be fuel savers. You will not be able to accurately discern objects using radar, as there will be fog, smoke and water spray, which will get in your way. You will have to fight in the fog and darkness. Well-positioned enemies will be able to gun you down. Do not use your light at night, as they will see you. You will need to use a flashlight, and make sure it is above your head and behind you. Use buttons CTRL + ESC to quickly change target, switch to a cannon and add an explosive shell to your bombs and missiles. Use all your guns - you should not use less than three. If you do not use a gun, the enemy will have an advantage. Aiming accuracy depends on your weapons and their installation. You can improve it by wearing helmets with additional radar detection. You should use missiles to keep your enemy at a distance, as this is the cheapest way to kill. Use the radar control on the game screen to receive information about enemy aircraft, when they are trying to attack you. You can use the takeoff/landing control and anti-aircraft gun. You need to watch out for enemy aircraft as they can see you and shoot you. When you have enemies on the radar, use the scan button to see when they come close to you. Use the radar to identify the location of your enemies and use the machine gun to fire at them. Be careful of surface mines and ground based anti-aircraft artillery. You can use anti-aircraft weapons, as they can destroy missiles and bomb your enemies. However, you need to pay attention to the airspace map on

Although these are all great have you ever heard of a film or a musical which had sombre or dark themes? Music has a wonderfully powerful way in playing over the pathos of humanity, loneliness, hopelessness or despair. It can lift the spirits of even the worst characters whether bringing them together into some semblance of community or understanding - even sometimes raising them to a cosmic level. It is perhaps this inherent power which makes music so ingrained in our culture, from anti-warsong to heavy metal to the cheering crowd. Its own inherent power is an unstoppable force and we use it to create the soundtrack to our lives. We want our music to reflect what we are doing. And for some of us, our soundtrack will be none other than Mozart, The Beatles, or a Frank Zappa track. However on the opposite end of the spectrum, there are musicals and films which are just absolutely painfully dark or often drizzling with angst. Hence they make up a far smaller percentage of films and musicals. Indeed, I think they are even harder to find than those which are so upbeat that there aren't enough words to express how fantastic those songs are. So I've compiled a Top 10 soundtrack to the darkest films and musicals. And it's just going to be a list of 10. I'm sure the political leanings of the list is going to be heavily skewed toward the right of the spectrum. But I'm not sure I have the energy to restrain myself or add much more to this list! 10. Barlow Girl, The Flintstones (1992) Barlow Girl, is a film put out in the '90s (it was remade in the late '00s) and is a female version of Barney Miller. The song Barlow Girl is sung by Fred, letting his family and friends know that things in his new life in Bedrock are not going that well. Some gripes I would list... These songs weren't extremely dark but Diversity and phylogeny of plant thioredoxin superfamily members. Reaction with 1,1,3,3-tetramethylguanidine hydrochloride (trimethylguanidine, TMG) leads to thioredoxin-like proteins of several plant species. In this study, we identified and characterized the respective gene family. Up to 36 cDNAs were identified in seven species, revealing that the thioredoxin-like family (Class I) comprises a highly variable group of genes. The members of Class I share with cysteine-based Class Ia members the pattern of two highly conserved WCGWC and CCGHC repeats and a catalytic and a reductase active-site motif. Phylogenetic and classification analyses showed that class I members are split into three subclasses, classified either by reaction mechanism (thioredoxin-like, Class II; NADP-dependent glutathione reductase-like, Class III) or by the motif that leads to catalytic activity (class Ia, Class Ib, and Class Ic).
