But for every sunny, breezy movie night, there are many others where people don’t go and would never go to the movies. What does this mean for the local economy? Clayton Walters, Head of Government and Communications at the British Film Institute, explains: Hollywood is going to do what it does best – delay and push things out. This is a common practice in Hollywood, and it means that the promotion and publicity is happening in the US instead of the UK. The industry is delaying the UK tax credit announcement until early 2016. So that means until the end of March 2016, the UK Film Council will make ‘interim’ grants to UK distributors and producers to finance their cinema releases, which e79caf774b
