FaceRig is a face replacement game which allows you to completely transform your game characters into any of the 7 avatars included.

By choosing a unique look for each character, players can further personalize their game characters, and it also works as a costume. With its highly sophisticated face replacement system, players can now customize their game characters to a level that they never thought possible before. Features: 1. Dynamic Face Replacement System: FaceRig is the first face replacement game that works with dynamic face replacement and therefore, it has a unique feature called "Dynamic Morphs". The uniqueness of FaceRig's dynamic morphs allow players to completely create their own face pattern.

They are then animated by the effect of the 3D face animation in the game. Players can have eyes, noses, moustaches, beards and more that can be custom combined to form a face pattern that suits them best. Using FaceRig, players can also select from a wide selection of thousands of skintones, eye colors, eyebrows, eye lines, nose shapes, eye sizes, mouth shapes, teeth color and more. It also features face selectors to quickly change in-game. 2. Character

Animation Control: In addition to the standard FaceRig tool, FaceRig features a unique animation control function for game character animation, enabling players to fine tune the facial movements of characters. FaceRig comes with face animation charts that are divided into 6 key facial movements to be more easy for players to use. There is no need to constantly adjust the facial movements of characters as this game allows players to select from 6 facial animation charts. These 6 charts include: - Labial Flexion: Open and close the lips. - Labial Raising: Raise or lower the lips. - Labial Raising Range: Degree of raising the lips. - Lips In: Extend the lips. - Lips Out: Pull the lips backwards. - Lip Protrusion: The cheeks protrude 3. Face Rig Settings and Tools: FaceRig comes with three sets of settings, all of which are customizable by players. The three sets of settings include: The default FaceRig settings. The FaceRig settings for key facial movements, including Labial Raising, Labial Flexion, Lips In, Lips Out and Lip Protrusion c9d1549cdd

(Legacy Options) Building an Arachnos Swarm by William Blatz, OPTIONAL It is always safest to play with known characters, even in a game with a campaign system. Why take a chance? For many years, one of my favorite additions to Core Rulebook (GR) campaigns was the Ork Swarm. It was a huge variety of swarms, with a few spread-out units at the beginning, and every group turning out to be one of the most dangerous, skilled, and powerful units at the end. Another favorite feature, but one that came with a price, was the Swarm, which could be found in the Homebrew section. However, there was a caveat: each Swarm came with their own campaign; the Keeper's hunch might not always be right. Was it worth it? It was, and if you were willing to invest the time and effort to build up a team, it could make for some brutal gaming. Who doesn't love they're all the same? Conventionally, Arachnos Swarms don't serve much purpose to anyone, other than the theory of Insectoid Supermanship. How then did I build up my own Swarm? What kind of creatures, and what campaign did I need to build up a team for? And there are few things, or maybe, well, far fewer than there are things, that I enjoy more than I enjoy planting a seed and watching it grow. Lately, however, I have been taking more and more interest in plastic models, especially the Warhammer 40K Chimera variety. One of the models that first sparked my interest was an Arachnos Swarm, sadly without any reference point from any of the 40K source material. My first experiment was to build up the best Arachnos that existed to be used in the Space Marine chapter. There was nothing special about their function, but they were easy to use, and with only a crew and some company on the model, they still looked great in game. They did well around me in the onerous campaign, but they never really separated themselves from the rest of the other swarms. It was at this time, before the current release of the Arachnos Swarm from Pathfinder RPG, that I realized the potential of these Swarm; I realized just how much they could fit into a campaign, how they could win a game on their own, and how easy they were to use.
