Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to a light signal repeater or transmitter, and more particularly to a miniature light signal repeater/transmitter that is suitable for use in a vertical cavity surface emitting laser (VCSEL). 2. Description of Related Art Light signal repeaters, such as light signal repeaters that are used in wavelength division multiplexing (WDM) systems, generally operate on the assumption that a particular repeater is mounted at the same location, in the same direction, and in the same plane, as a light emitting device to be repetitively transmitted. Therefore, such light signal repeaters generally comprise a waveguide through which the light from the light emitting device is directed. In addition to the light emitting device, a light signal repeater generally includes a prism, one or more lenses, a reflector, and a reflector. In the case of a single mode light signal repeater, that portion of the light that travels straight through the waveguide is reflected off the reflector and then transmitted back through the waveguide through the prism or lens, as if the waveguide were a mirror. In the case of a multimode light signal repeater, that portion of the light that travels straight through the waveguide is reflected off the reflector and is split into that portion that travels straight through the waveguide and that portion that travels out of the waveguide. However, such a typical light signal repeater is a discrete
